Henry C. Wallace of Des Moines, publisher of Wallace's Farmer, and the man whom Senator Harding consulted recently concerning the agricultural problems of the country, spoke yesterday from the producer's standpoint with regard to high meat prices at the convention of the Master Butchers of America in the Hotel Pennsylvania. Mr. Waiface attacked the Administration's campaign to reduce the cost of living by

The total supply of Government meats is said to be hardly enough to last the people in this country more than a week. Its sale will depress and hold down livestock prices and will reduce production. This will before long cause a period of abnormally high prices for meats and will make things harder
